

International Gender Differences in Fraudulent Behavior

Katelyn Chafin, West Virginia University
Presha E. Neidermeyer, West Virginia University

Abstract

This research paper analyzes the differences between female and male ethical behaviors and responses in the workplace. The research is conducted in an effort to determine whether or not there is a difference between the magnitude of fraud committed by males and females at face value, and when adjusted for inflation in the United States. This paper also examines the frequency of female versus male fraud in various countries. Through the use the findings of several accredited companies and numerous research articles, this paper attempts to determine what might cause such disparities in the magnitude of fraud committed by both genders as well as make a prediction about future gender fraud statistics.